

Sturm, Ruger & Company, Inc. Second Quarter Report 2002

William B. Ruger 1916-2002

To Our Stockholders:

It is our sad duty to report that William Batterman Ruger, founder and Chairman Emeritus of Sturm, Ruger & Company, Inc., died peacefully at home on Saturday, July 6, 2002, at age 86, after a period of failing health. As you know, Mr. Ruger worked diligently for more than fifty years to establish and lead this Company to become the largest firearms manufacturer in the United States.

Bill was widely recognized as one of America's greatest gun designers and a legend in American industry, and had a hand in the original design and time-honored styling of every firearm this Company has produced. He continued to work on new creations up until his death. Mr. Ruger steered our business from "it can't be done" remarks to a New York Stock Exchange corporation which has produced more than 20,000,000 firearms for hunting, target shooting, collecting, self-defense, law enforcement and government agencies. Under his leadership, the Company produced more types of sporting firearms than any other firearms firm in the world. His first firearm introduction in 1949, a stylish .22 caliber target pistol, was considered "the first gun" of many Americans, and is still one of the most popular target pistols in widespread use.

"Ruger was a true firearms genius who mastered the disciplines of inventing, designing, engineering, manufacturing and marketing better than anyone since Samuel Colt," said R. L. Wilson, firearms historian and Mr. Ruger's biographer. "No one in the 20th century so clearly dominated the field, or was so skilled at articulating the unique appeal of quality firearms for legitimate uses."

Born June 21, 1916 in Brooklyn, New York, Mr. Ruger first developed his passion for guns when he received his own rifle from his father at age 12. As a student at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, he converted an empty room into a machine shop and, in 1938, came up with initial designs for what eventually became a light machine gun for the Army – executing the drawings on his in-laws' dining room table. Ordnance officials liked the gun, and launched Ruger into becoming a full-time gun designer. He helped invent and patent dozens of models of sporting firearms during the last 53 years, which were instant and enduring successes. His advertising stressed mechanical innovation and safety.

When not involved with his firearms operations, Mr. Ruger indulged his life-long passions, including antique firearms, 19th Century Western American art, and his nationally noted antique car collection of more than 30 vehicles, including Bentleys, Rolls-Royces, Bugattis, Stutzes, and a 1913 Mercer Raceabout, among others. He commissioned the design and construction of a classically styled sports tourer automobile in 1970 called the Ruger Special, based on the design of the 1929 Bentley 4¹/₂ liter. Mr. Ruger also designed and commissioned a 92-foot yacht, the Titania. "It's a remarkable thing, forging a life from your true passion," Mr. Ruger said upon receiving the Man of the Year Award at the 1998 SHOT Show.

Mr. Ruger's philanthropy was especially evident through charities in communities where the Company's manufacturing plants are located, as well as the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, where he served as a member of the Board of Trustees for over 15 years.

"Our business is more than a business; it is like some sports – it has a heart. Guns aren't just something you make like tools or chairs or some other utility objects. Guns are valuable possessions and provoke all sorts of emotional responses in people. I've often said that if we like a product, our customers will like it, for many reasons, which sometimes cannot be adequately expressed," Mr. Ruger stated in Peterson's SHOT Business in January, 1998.

While Bill's inspirational leadership and guidance will be sincerely missed by all who were privileged to know and work for him, we will continue the traditions of excellence and hard work that he exemplified during his active life with the Company, and on which this Company was founded. The continued success of this Company, its products, and the preservation of the rights of law-abiding citizens to keep and bear arms will be his legacy.
